

DAWNING

The night has fled, yet in the sky
Pale, sleepy stars still hold;
Across the cast a silvery mist
Becomes a sea of gold.

Like human bodies stooped with age,
The scarred hills bravely stand,
Awaiting there the magic touch
Of day's transforming hand.

By A. W. N.

From Girlhood Days Magazine
June 17, 1934 – Vol. 72, No. 38, Pg. 2