

A SPRING TWILIGHT

The western sky is full of primrose lights
Toward its mecca, hurrying shadows flee
Shoulder to shoulder stand the naked hills
Draped with a starry midst: And noiselessly
The south wind, damply-soft, comes carrying
The promise of growth that is to be

By Beth Slater Whitson

From: The Post-Standard (Syracuse, NY) Newspaper
Thursday – March 21, 1907 – Page 4
And taken from “Ainslee’s” Magazine