

EVENING

Across the soft, grey velvet of the fields,
In troops, the days belated shadows race:
The final ray of sunset lights the hills
Like sudden smile across an angel face:
And, dimly etched upon the paling sky,
The outline of a star I faintly trace.

By: Beth Slater Whitson

From: Ainslee's Magazine
Vol. 20, No. 5, Pg. 43
December, 1907