

TRANSFORMATION

The world that yesterday was gray
And wrapped in shadow-gloom
Has blossomed on its thousand hills,
And from its busy loom.

A fabric marvelously bright
Grows swiftly, fold on fold:
Love's magic has transformed it thus—
Transmuted dross to gold.

By: Beth Slater Whitson

From: Singing Wires: A Book of Poems – Page 20
Bruce Humphries Publishing – Boston
Copyright 1958 – LOC Catalog No. 58-6821